The 'Good American'

By Dennis Prager

In my previous column, I described how I have come to better understand the moral problem of the "'good German,' the term used to describe the average, presumably decent German, who did nothing to hurt Jews but also did nothing to help them and did nothing to undermine the Nazi regime."

Watching America accept the rationally and morally indefensible physical and economic lockdown of the country, I concluded: "Apathy in the face of tyranny turns out not to be a German or Russian characteristic. I just never thought it could happen in America."

In one week, it has gotten worse. Now we are faced with a lockdown on speech the likes of which have never been seen in America. And the parallels with Germany are even more stark. The left-wing party (the Democrats) and the left-wing media (the "mainstream media") are using the mob invasion of the Capitol exactly the way the Nazis used the Reichstag fire.

On Feb. 27, 1933, exactly one month after the Nazis came to power, the German parliament building, the Reichstag, was set ablaze. The Nazis blamed the fire on their archenemy, the communists, and used the fire to essentially extinguish the Communist Party and its ability to publish, speak or otherwise spread its message. Using the Reichstag fire as an excuse, the Nazis passed the Enabling Act, a law that gave the Nazi chancellor, Adolf Hitler, the power to pass laws by decree — without the Reichstag.

Now to America 2021.

On Jan. 6, 2021, a right-wing mob of a few hundred people broke away from a peaceful right-wing protest involving tens, if not hundreds, of thousands of American conservatives and forced its way into the US Capitol. One Capitol policeman was killed after being hit in the head with a fire extinguisher, and one of the right-wing Capitol invaders was shot by a Capitol police officer. (A handful of others who died in the vicinity of the Capitol did so of nonviolent causes.) Aside from smashed windows, the mob seems to have done little damage to the Capitol. Their intent is still not clear. It seems to have been largely catharsis. They hurt no legislators, and if they intended to overthrow the government, they were delusional.

Beginning the next day, the American left used the Capitol mob just as the Nazis used the Reichstag: as an excuse to subjugate its conservative enemies and further squelch civil liberties in America — specifically, freedom of speech.

Twitter not only permanently banned the account of President of the United States but permanently banned him from Twitter. Any Twitter account found tweeting Donald Trump was permanently banned.

The left was able to do all this not only by using the Capitol mob incident but also by engaging in a series of lies.

The first was blaming the attack on President Donald Trump. Over and over, in every left-wing medium and stated repeatedly by Democrats, Trump is blamed for "inciting" the riot in his speech just before it took place. Almost never is a Trump quote cited. Because there is none. On the contrary, he did say, "I know that everyone here will soon be marching over to the Capitol building to peacefully and patriotically make your voices heard" (italics added).

Another lie was the immediate labeling of the mob attack on the Capitol as "insurrection." All left-wing media and Democrats now refer to the event as an "insurrection," a term defined by almost every dictionary as "an act or instance of revolting against civil authority or an established government." As morally repulsive as the actions of the mob were, they did not constitute a revolt against civil authority or an established government. Disrupting the work of legislators for a few hours — as wrong as that was — does not constitute a "revolt."

But what proves the left's "insurrection" label as a lie is that Democrats and their media never once labeled the left-wing riots of 2020 — which involved the destruction by fire and/or occupation and vandalizing of police stations, and the establishment of "autonomous zones," which, by definition, revolted against "established governments" — as an "insurrection." The enormous number of businesses burned down, looted or otherwise destroyed was barely covered by the mainstream media, and their violent perpetrators were almost never prosecuted, let alone condemned, as engaging in an insurrection. Dozens of people were killed in these riots, yet there was more outcry and condemnation against the hours-long occupation of the US Capitol than against six months of left-wing violent riots.

Then, like the Nazi regime after the Reichstag fire, the left immediately moved to further curtail civil liberties, specifically conservatives' ability to promote their ideas. Twitter and Amazon made it impossible for the alternative to Twitter, Parler, to exist, all in the name of preventing another right-wing "insurrection."

In the name of the Capitol "insurrection," the Democrats announced they would impeach the President of the United States, though he had only 14 days left in office.

In the name of the Capitol "insurrection," the editor of Forbes, Randall Lane, announced that Forbes media was "holding those who lied for Trump accountable" in what he called "a truth reckoning": "Hire any of Trump's (press secretaries)," Lane warned, "and Forbes will assume that everything your company or firm talks about is a lie."

In the name of the Capitol mob attack, 159 law professors at Chapman University have called for the firing of John Eastman, a tenured fellow law professor and holder of an endowed chair at Chapman — because "his actions Wednesday (that) helped incite a riot." Eastman had spoken at the Trump rally.

The professors ended their Los Angeles Times letter: "He does not belong on our campus."

Words well chosen.

What the left is doing is announcing — and enforcing — that conservatives "do not belong" in our society. The parallels to 1933 are precise. And most good Americans are keeping silent, just as did most Germans. Though they do not risk being beaten up, are Americans in 2021 as afraid of the American left as Germans in 1933 were of the German fascists? We're about to find out.

Politics & Legislation

by John Faro, Political Junkie

The following are excerpts from a Team NHGOP email:

The Democrats have started filing legislation for the upcoming legislative term, and their bills are a blast from the past. They're still pursuing the same out-of-touch agenda that Granite State voters rejected on November 3rd, and we need to show them that we're paying attention. Here are just some of their pieces of proposed legislation:

Regulations: (most are in the LSR stage, so they are just numbers)

0001 relative to the state minimum hourly rate, 0293 relative to the licensure and regulation of music therapists, 0741 prohibiting the use of polystyrene foam.

Gun Restrictions:

0143 establishing a protective order for vulnerable adults. (Red Flag anyone?), 0252 requiring background checks for commercial firearms sales. (still doesn't make sense)

Weakening Voter Laws:

0745 relative to domicile, residency, voter registration, and investigation of voter verification letters, and relative to the term's resident, inhabitant, residence, and residency. (need to rig an election anyone?)

Rumor has it that the NH Democrats are even going to resurrect their disastrous Income Tax legislation. (Just what we need with so many out of work.)

Bills have been filed that could be detrimental to the firearm community, depending on how they are worded. Gun Owners of New Hampshire has found at least twelve that are very suspicious. If you have the time to check these out on the state legislative website, there are quite a few that need a lot of scrutiny.

Once the LSR's are been written in bill form, the real work will start to determine what adverse effect these could have on our rights. We, as gun owners, have fought these attacks on our rights for a lot of years and obviously the fight is not over. It will never be over for us and future generations unless we inform and educate people about the legal, safe use of firearms and our grassroots commitment to the shooting sports.

With the Democrats in the Washington Swamp back in power they are coming after us with a vengeance. "Ever Vigilant" will be our watch words, once again, to keep the uninformed social warriors at bay.

Don't forget Valentine's Day for your special lady. We're in enough trouble already.
